Weather Preparedness and Packing List:

The winter temperature in the Yellowstone Region can vary from the single digits to the upper 30's during February. The average elevation is between 6,200 – 8,000 feet, so it is considered a high-elevation area. There is almost always plenty of snow on the ground. The snow plows stay very busy and keep the roads cleared enough for life to move along just fine during heavy snow fall in the region. In fact, winter is a high tourist season in the region because of the snow. You will need basic winter gear to enjoy the planned activities on this trip. We recommend layering clothes with a moisture wicking undershirt, lightweight shirts and heavier weight shirts, a warm vest, a warm and waterproof jacket (like a ski jacket). Bring waterproof gloves, a hat or hood, neck wrap or scarf, moisture wicking long johns or fleece leggings work well under pants. Warm socks and waterproof snow boots are a must, because you will most likely be walking in snow - a mid-calf snow boot is best.

Optional Excursions we can coordinate for you:

Dogsledding, skiing, snowshoeing, snowmobiling, sleigh rides and snowcoach rides. There are plenty of winter activities to enjoy in the Yellowstone Region and we can help you make the most of your time in Jackson Hole.
